

BY THE "AMERICA."

We are afraid the vast resources of India will have undergone considerable losses; for they are strongly contradictory, and less explicit than they ought to be. For instance, one report estimates the losses of the allies at English 2,000, French 13,000, and receives a flat contradiction in the following which did not reach us in the usual way:

The Paris correspondence says it is reported that 25,000 men were embarked at Balaklava, for the north of Sebastopol. Frenchmen say the south side will scarcely hold out, for they are strongly contradictory, and less explicit than they ought to be. For instance, one report estimates the losses of the allies at English 2,000, French 13,000, and receives a flat contradiction in the following which did not reach us in the usual way:

The Paris correspondence says it is reported that 25,000 men were embarked at Balaklava, for the north of Sebastopol.

The return of the London Post says there were 500 or 600 killed, 1,400 to 1,500 wounded. The French loss is about 2,000.

General MacMahon and Frochereau are said to be among the killed, and Baudinot was killed or wounded.

Pelissier had been created a Marshal of France.

A general De Lenn had been celebrated in Notre Dame. The Emperor of France attended in person.

The Allies had seen a vote of thanks to her army.

The Allies were hastening preparations in case of Gotschakoff attempting to reach Perekop, so as to unite with Liprandi.

There can be no doubt that the allies are in full possession of Sebastopol, and that they will soon be masters of the whole of the Crimean territory. The victory is complete, and we have sufficient cause for rejoicing over the glorious result.

From the London Correspondent of the N.Y. Courier, Sept. 11.

This time there is no news from Sebastopol. It is fallen indeed. In England, the glorious tidings are not much circumscribed as diffused; the air is full of rejoicings; you pass a man in the street and his bearing face tells you he is much in a second edition of the Times. If yourendezvous and camp out here the next day, the crowd, or dumb and could not understand the meaning of the enthusiastic gathering at every street corner, if you could not read a word from the placards staring at you from every wall and window—you could not help hating the French. Indeed, the press, the telegraphs, the railroads, are quite unequal to the occasion: the Times cannot be bought for a shilling, second hand; the police have to guard the newspaper offices that besiege them, so the good news has to spread in the old primitive way. The editions come posting after. Everybody is on tip-toe. The Times isn't so far wrong in its dictat "Universal England gets drunk," the very bears look intelligent and animated; the very dead seem to half appreciate the glorious occasion. The truth is that England feels as if her day of rejoicing had come, and she rejoices without stint or measure.

In General Simpson's first despatch, he informed us that "the attack against the Redan was not needed." Nothing was said of the enterprise, but the French in their assault of the Central fort, the little Redan, and nothing to explain or palliate what bore the semblance of a defeat. As was very natural, this occasioned no little disappointment: it was rather a blow to the pique which the victory was received, that the English did not share the glory of it.

Then followed the news that the English had been beaten, and equal glory earned by each of the assaulting parties. There is still a sort of wish that the English may have taken a more brilliant, and more destructive part in the final consummation, no one can say that any grudging or envy is observable amid the universal enthusiasm which accords to the French the chief laurels won on the field of battle.

You will notice that though only the hands of the allies, the universal expression is that Sebastopol has fallen. Perhaps the moment of success, we are again deluding ourselves as to the obstacles which stand in the way of a complete possession of the place.

General Simpson, however, represented that the North town came out long; that the fortresses, though strong, are not large enough to protect a numerous garrison, and that the allies will be able effectually to attack from the South town. The Russian army also is in a very precarious position, and all the advantages of position, numbers, and all the merits, are now with the allied forces.

The other side of all victories must succeed the bright side. As yet we only know in general that the casualties were very heavy. That the men lost, killed and wounded, 2,000 men, lost, killed and wounded, 5 or 6 are hardly believed. Some are said to have been killed.

The Russians took no part in the assault, but the few men killed in the trenches.

Of the French men we know nothing definite. "Presentation of the Redan." This is not just the day on which to review this question.

That was dangerous speculating; happily for the pamphleteer, he has kept it incognito; but we will be sure never to identify him now. Nor is this the day for Le Figaro, the Tribune, and other upholders of Marianne's divinity.

A second review, a retrospective review of "Presentation of Sebastopol," would not be amiss in these journals.

(From the London Post, Sept. 11.)

The great southern stronghold of Russia exists no more! Its arsenals are ruined, its walls shapeless heaps—and the vast fields both in rear, and sheltered with such pride, is burnt to ashes, without one exception.

The war was won, without one exception. The Russian army had labored and expensed in utterly preparing for the war. We have nothing to fear from the North Redan, it will soon be ours. We command at first with certainty. It cannot hold a large garrison, and the troops escaped near it or in its neighborhood are in a most precarious condition. The army of General Liprandi, on the Mackenzie Heights, is in great want of water, and provisions are scarce. In the southern side of Sebastopol great quantities of provisions must have been destroyed, and on the north's side there are no sufficient places of deposit for any sufficient quantity of food.

On the 2nd of Sept. it was commanded by our position at Smolensk, to which we are now free to transport large and adequate forces to cut off the communications of the fort, to take the town in the rear, and to inflict a severe defeat on every Russian in the Crimea.

Of two things, either we shall march to Sebastopol, or they will play the desperate game, and at once make peace.

We are ready for them, and doubt not the result. The consequence of the fall of Sebastopol will be immense, both strategically and politically.

It is not expedient to enter the harbor of Sebastopol, for Constantine is a silent witness.

Probably the Allies will attack for Constantine and Bayrta.

The return of the London Post says there were 500 or 600 killed, 1,400 to 1,500 wounded. The French loss is about 2,000.

General MacMahon and Frochereau are said to be among the killed, and Baudinot was killed or wounded.

Pelissier had been created a Marshal of France.

A general De Lenn had been celebrated in Notre Dame. The Emperor of France attended in person.

The Allies had seen a vote of thanks to her army.

The Allies were hastening preparations in case of Gotschakoff attempting to reach Perekop, so as to unite with Liprandi.

There can be no doubt that the allies are in full possession of Sebastopol, and that they will soon be masters of the whole of the Crimean territory. The victory is complete, and we have sufficient cause for rejoicing over the glorious result.

The INSIDE OF SEBASTOPOL.

Interesting Letter from an English Physician in the Russian Service.

The Nashville Times (Gazette) publishes a letter from Scotland, written by Dr. John H. Morton, a surgeon in the service of the Czar, at Sebastopol.

Make some interesting extracts from the letter, which is written in intervals between the 8th and 15th Sept.

You have no idea how much destruction one bomb will create, if it is a large one; and the French are helping us to them at present of course, for the effect of which, we have considerable numbers of men wounded and killed every day.

For a description of Sebastopol, it is impossible to find a better than that given by a Frenchman, who occupies a house in my room, and who is a native of the town.

The First Bombardment—Order of Attack—Capture of the Malakoff and Redan.

The correspondent of the Daily News, writing on the eve of the assault, says: "The Redan must be taken before the Malakoff can be made to yield the Malakoff is actually occupied by the French. Then our stormers will dash at the Redan, the French supporting them by a simultaneous bombardment from their batteries."

According to the Javabé Russa, the allies are making their position at Kertch very strong. Emigrants from that place state that the heights near the site of Fort Paul have been occupied by the allies. On the 24th of August the fort was armed with 40 pieces of cannon, and more guns were expected from Sebastopol. There were in Kertch and Yenikale 1,200 French, 400 English, and 11,000 Turks.

FIEDMONT.

The Courrier des Finances de Gram states that the 15th announces the departure of more Piedmontese troops for the Crimea, and of the youngest son of the late Count Balbo.

There were five of them; two more have now others for the Crimea, and the last two have been sent to the dominion career to serve, already stated, as a common soldier in the present war.

REFUSE OF THE RUSSIANS AT KARS.

The Russians, who are still besieging Kars, in Asia, were repulsed by the Turkish garrison in an attempt to take one of the outworks on the 7th August, and the following day the Russian force retreated, and the 2nd brigades of the Light Division, with the first brigade of a reserve, General M. G. S. Tschet, were established in Kars, with command of the whole. A general feeling of confidence in the result prevails.

The following details of the assault itself are from a French letter dated Constantinople:

"The Malakoff Tower, attacked with unexpected impetuosity to the cry of 'Vive l'Empereur,' was carried after a murderous struggle on both sides. The fortifications were occupied without delay, and batteries were established with remarkable celerity. The little Redan of Careening Bay was also taken, but as the Russian batteries poured down a heavy fire upon us whenever we ventured to approach, our men were obliged to abandon it to return to its intervals. The few details I have picked up I send you in haste, as the Indus weighs anchor in two hours."

"On the night of the 7th all the successive arrangements were taken by General Palmerin with absolute precision. On the 8th, at mid-day, our assulting columns issued from their posts, and marched on with an impetuosity beyond all description, and the strength of the Russian Black Sea fleet, now utterly destroyed, the loss of the loss of Sebastopol, Russia, was not in a momentary point of time.

"The last of the Russian ships were set on fire in front of the garrison, and the fort and the following morning the Redan had not been destroyed by our shot were sunk by the Russians. The south part of the city was on fire, and the Russians passed into the north parts."

"Our operations were successful. Several Generals have been killed; four wounded. I have only been able to ascertain one name among the latter—that of General Bosquet. We have, moreover, 4,000 men hors de combat. I can assure you of the exactness of this last number, and the first to have fallen in battle."

The attack on the Redan by the English was made with the utmost vigor. They were repulsed three times, but each time those gallant troops returned to the charge, and remained masters of the position. The capture of Careening Bay was also occupied, but the Russian force, which inflicted enormous injury on the first occupants, had run and laid down by Catherine, Potemkin, and Potemkin, has ceased to be by when they threw off disease of the Isthmus of Perekop and the ruin of the town.

The regular fortifications, on the contrary, have been taken with ease, and, in some cases to which I believe, by the Malakoff, built for its defence.

On the 17th Sept., the Turkish troops at Constantinople, intended for Asia, were sent to Europe.

The Anglo-Turkish contingent would go to Trebizond, and be placed under Omar Pacha. It is also announced that considerable bodies of French troops had been sent to Eupatoria.

Vienna despatches say that Kars was greatly strengthened, and that the garrison were eating horse flesh.

Advices from Trebizond, dated 6th Sept., announce that the Russians had abandoned Erzeroum, and were at Malazgirt.

The Baltic—Danzic, Friday, 28th Sept.—The steamer Bulldog has arrived here with mails from the fleet.

All the high-pressure block-ships had left England.

The winter here continues unbroken.

The Times Paris correspondent writes on the 27th that the Baltic will win.

Great letters from Athens state that the fall of Sebastianople had produced the greatest consternation among the partisans of Russia who were always boasting of the impossibility of the allies succeeding.

The Misses waited on the French and English Ambassadors to offer their warm congratulations.

DENMARK.—The Folketing now in session at Copenhagen has definitely approved by a vote of 54 to 44, all the proposed concessions to the Danes.

NAPLES.—A circular has been given to the police authorities throughout the kingdom of Naples, saying that although Massini had retired from office, no change will take place.

NOT BAD.—The Niagara Mail says: "A new locomotive called the Niagara, with a screw like a Russian in the hands of a Connaught Ranger, was placed on the Erie and Ontario Railroad on Monday last."

THE SWEET NIGHTINGALE.—Mrs. Jenny Lind, the nightingale, has been attacked with some terrible disease in the face, without the slightest hope of recovery.

THE MORNING STAR—The stores and institutions of the Slaveholding Confederacy have to the Russian Government severely militated.

ANOTHER.—Marine Royal has been appointed Inspector of the Royal Engineers. Mr. Ryan's experience in the Inspector General's Department admirably fits him for the duties of Inspector.

The Gladys has a description of a recent dinner at Brampton in the following Hibernian manner—

"Ministerial Dinner at Brampton—None of the Ministers present."

ANOTHER BABY ARRIVED.—Our neighbors on the other side, it would seem, are getting as busy setting up the nursery, that there is no knowing what will be the result. The principal cities in the Union have already had a "Show," and we may expect soon to hear of its arrival in our city.

THE BUFFALO.—Buffalo has had an exhibition in a small way, but it is largely failed, and now Rochester, it appears, is to have a grand exhibition, and the paper advertises his Grand National Show to take place in that city, commencing on the 9th inst.

$100,000.—The slaves of the Slaveholders of course, triplets, triplets, and quartets, will have to give good testimony that their representations are true, or else they will be compelled to be bombarded by the ladies of Rochester. Get ye cripples! and barns for tomfoolery.—Bunker.

THE Y. M. C. of the International says: Our city is now a great slave market, little black blocks, with their mothers are contending for the palm of superiority. Seven hundred slaves are daily brought into the city. For the best quarters, $500. Best traps, $50. Twin $25. For the finest, $100. Neither quarter nor traps have yet been sold, but the particular Negroes do not come up to their value, and the number of so many black persons in one room makes it hard to be found necessary to keep gas in day.

The most confirmed cases of the most distressing diseases arise from indulgence. All of us, more or less, are guilty of it, but we must not act as if it is a general thing, we do not attempt to medicate our slaves, we do not attempt to medicate our public men, we all are our own guides in the size of medicine we take. We are told that the Rev. Dr. Headen's German Bitters, the best of all, are prescribed by Dr. C. M. Jackson, No. 120 Arch Street, Philadelphia.—(See Weekly.—See advertisement.)

THE TRIALS OF AN EDITOR.
BY KATE NIXVILLE.

REMARKABLE DISCOVERY!!!
IN FOREST PLANTS.

DR. HALSEY, of New York, has discovered medicinal properties in certain plants found growing in the forests of the country, which he has produced two remedies which cure the worst diseases.

The first of these plants he obtains in the form of extracts, so pure and concentrated, as to be equal to the best of the essences, and one of the extract is then prepared for use in the form of pills, which are called Dr. Halsey's Pills.

The other remedy is produced from the virtues of seven plants, by a process of his own invention, and is sold under the name of Dr. Halsey's Extract.

Dr. Halsey's Extract and Dr. Halsey's Pills.

There are three things peculiar to these pills alone: They never grip nor weaken the system.

This is because they contain no drugs or materials, but that they have the pure virtues of the plants which are used.

An extract of the roots of the plant, and a decoction of the leaves and flowers of the plant, and a wine produced from medicinal plants of the forest, a wine never before accomplished.
